

Handwritten Latin text on a fragment of parchment, likely a page from a manuscript. The text is dense and appears to be a philosophical or theological treatise, possibly related to the 'Florilegium' mentioned in the caption. The script is a cursive hand typical of the late Middle Ages or early modern period. The parchment is aged and shows signs of wear, with some staining and a small hole near the top left corner.

