

B

Fragment of a handwritten manuscript page, likely from a philosophical text. The text is written in a dense, cursive script, possibly a medieval or early modern hand. The fragment is heavily stained and damaged, particularly along the left and bottom edges, where the ink is obscured by dark spots and tears in the paper. The text is arranged in several lines, with some words appearing to be in a different script or dialect than others, possibly indicating a mix of languages or a specific dialect. The overall appearance is that of an ancient or historical document that has survived in a fragmentary state.

