

M^r Wanley's Gloss
upon the 2 last preceding Slipp^s viz^t

N^o. 18.

This is a Fragment of the Gospell of S^t. Matthew, taken from a M^s. Copy of the Gospells in the Cathedrall-Library at Durham. As to the Hand; It is English, and bears a good Resemblance to a Latin Charter of Mlotarius King of Kent now extant in y^e Cotton-Library [AVGVSTVS.II.] which bears Date Indictione septima, i. e. about the Year of our Lord 679. For this reason, I guess the said Book, & consequently this Fragment of it, to be, at least, a Thousand Years Old.

N^o. 19.

This is a Fragment of a Prologue praefixt to S^t. Luke's Gospell, taken from a M^s. Copy of the Gospells in the same Library. As to the Hand; It is Saxon, i. e. English: and (upon comparing it with others other Hands, both Older, Newer, & of about the same Age) it appears to be at least as Old as S^t. Eadfrid's Gospells in the Cotton-Library [NERO. D. IV.] Now if S^t. Eadfrid wrote that Book before he was made Bishop of Lindisfarne in the Year 687, whilst he was yet a Private man & at leisure, and the Book from whence this Fragment is taken seeming rather Older than that; We may be allowed to say, that this Fragment also was written, at least, a Thousand Years ago. And herein it is further Observable, that Luke is upon Every Leaf of this Gospell, wrote Lucanus.

Memdum—That these² were a Present to me, from my most hon^d. & reverend Friends, the Dean & Chapter of Durham, An^o. Domⁿⁱ. 1700.