

This image shows a single page from a medieval manuscript, folio 118, featuring two columns of Latin text in a Gothic script. The text is written in two columns per page, with large red initials marking the beginning of new sections. The script is characterized by its fluidity and the use of ligatures. The content of the text is a moral exhortation, likely from a didactic or homiletic work, discussing various sins and their outcomes. The handwriting is clear and legible, though some lines are slightly faded or obscured.